Annual Report

2013-2014
Chair’s Introduction

My first year as Africa All Party Parliamentary Group Chair and what a year it has been.

If there is one resounding lesson from the year’s work, it is about the breadth of individuals, organisations and Departments working on Africa. The APPG has brought together these differing perspectives, both within Parliament and across the broader policy sphere, across our range of activities.

Within Parliament our membership has continued to grow to 192 Parliamentarians across all parties, 71 of whom have attended at least one meeting or event. This must place us as one of the most wide-reaching All Party Parliamentary Groups.

Beyond Parliament, I have been delighted to see our relationships with the various Government Departments working on issues related to Africa, in particular, but not limited to, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, flourish, following on from the groundwork laid last year. Our roundtable on “Parliamentarians and the Media” held on 9th April was a first step in bringing together these two particular groups – as well as the various committees and groups within Parliament working on Africa - and I very much look forward to building bridges between these two communities over the years to come.

As well as broadening our range of partners, the year has seen a broadening of the type of activities the Group has undertaken.

A particular highlight was a general debate in the Chamber, secured and led on a cross-party basis by Hugh Bayley, Sir Malcolm Bruce and Martin Horwood, alongside myself. The debate saw 13 MPs discuss their perspectives and experiences of the UK’s relationship with Africa across a range of policy areas, highlighting the breadth and depth of knowledge about the African continent within our ranks. I was delighted to hear Jeremy Corbyn suggest this become an annual event and look forward to the Africa APPG taking this forward. Plans are now afoot to do something similar in the Lords, which I myself would be particularly interested to listen to and learn from. Watch this space.

Another highlight were the two visits to Africa undertaken by the Group at the end of last year. I was fortunate enough to visit Sierra Leone with Ian Lucas, under the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Fellowship Scheme, while Lord Steel, Lord Chidgey and Lord Cameron visited Ethiopia as part of a delegation joint with the British Group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union. We benefitted from additional financial support from SAB Miller. Both visits looked at the state of democracy in the respective countries, while the Ethiopia delegation had an additional aim of investigating the role of the African Union. This followed from the Group’s visit to the European Union in early 2012 and the delegation was honoured to meet with the African Union Chairperson H.E. Dr Dlamini Zuma, showing the reach of the Africa APPG within the continent.

The two visits fed into our most recent publication, a 55 page discussion document entitled “Democracy Soup”. The report makes for interesting reading, and I am pleased to say it does not shy away from some of the complexities and subtleties of the relationship between democracy and development. In particular it emphasises that weak links can undermine the whole governance system, highlighting a need for greater support to the legislative and judicial branches of Government.
We have also begun to draw on the experiences and expertise of Africa APPG Members to feed into the inquiries of the various Select Committees working on issues related to Africa. Specifically we submitted evidence to the Business, Innovation and Skills Committee inquiry on the extractive industries, and the International Development Committee inquiry on Sierra Leone, as well as writing to the International Development Committee’s inquiry on disability and development, based on the broader experiences of our Members.

The APPG has held 21 meetings and events over the year, including a mixture of roundtables and panel discussions, covering a broad range of issues and in collaboration with a wide range of partners. A highlight was a networking lunch at the FCO with the British Ambassadors and High Commissioners to Africa during their annual Leadership Week, which was attended by 40 parliamentarians, showing the high level of interest in issues related to Africa that exists within Parliament.

We have also continued to publish the weekly bulletin Africa in Parliament, which showcases the broad range of work on Africa in Parliament and is circulated amongst parliamentarians, Government officials and Embassies and High Commissions.

All this would not have been possible without the hard work of a number of people.

Specifically I would like to thank the Africa APPG’s Officers and Executive Committee for all their work over the year.

There are a couple I must mention individually.

I was extremely fortunate to inherit such an active and influential APPG and I must give my thanks to Hugh Bayley for his stalwart leadership of the APPG over the first decade of its existence. Without the time and effort Hugh has put into the Group over the years, my job would have been very much harder and I am delighted that Hugh has continued to remain involved with the group as a Vice-Chair.

At last year’s AGM Lord Brooke indicated that he was going to step down as Treasurer at the end of the tax year. Many thanks must go to him for his support to the APPG over the previous years, as well as to Chi Onwurah, who took hold of the reins, acting as Treasurer for the remainder of the year.

Finally, we remain indebted to the Royal African Society for providing the secretariat for the Africa APPG, as well as a source of expertise and guidance on developments within the African continent.

I have thoroughly enjoyed my first year as Africa APPG Chair, and look forward to working with the broad range of colleagues and partners on issues related to Africa as we go forward.

Membership and Participation

Membership of the Africa APPG stands at 192 Members across the House of Commons and the House of Lords, an increase from 161 Members in July 2013 and 106 Members in July 2012 (see Figure 1).

Attendance at Africa APPG events has been evenly split between MPs and Peers, with 51% of attendees from the House of Lords (see Figure 2).

NB Participation defined as number of Members attending each event
71 individual Parliamentarians (33 Peers and 38 MPs) have attended APPG meetings and events over the year (see Figure 3). This is an increase from 66 over the year 2012-2013 and 41 from 2011-2012.

This comprises a core who attend frequently, and a large number of Members who attend infrequently; 43 of the 71 Members who have participated in an Africa APPG event over the 2013-2014 year have attended only 1 meeting. The Members who have attended most frequently over the year are shown in Table 1.

Table 1: Members participating in Africa APPG activities most frequently.

Other than the FCO Leadership Lunch, which attracted 40 parliamentarians, the meetings with the highest turn-out of parliamentarians were roundtables with Ministers.
The formats of meetings attended by the largest number of Parliamentarians over the year were roundtable table discussions, as seen in Table 2. A similar number of parliamentarians have attended parliamentarian-only roundtables and roundtables where a select number of external guests are invited.
